

Time Is Growing Short For Best Results With Legumes

THERE'S not much question as to the value of winter legumes—the question is how best to get full advantage of them. The early planters of the South, the men who knew that if the green manure to be turned under is obtained. J. C. Lowery, Extension agronomist, advises farmers to plant Austrian pea and vetch on time regardless of weather conditions. If the soil is dry, it should be turned deeper than if there is sufficient moisture present.

Experiments with winter legumes in Southern States show that winter legumes, even Austrian peas or vetch, produce over twice the green manure per acre when planted in early October as when planted in late November or December. Further, growth of the legumes when planted late is not likely to offer much protection against erosion by winter rains.

P. O. Davis, State Extension Service Director, says farmers would do well to plant legumes at the proper time (by the middle of October at the latest) and to cover the seed with manure or earth. Experimental information and actual experience of farmers bear this out.

The Extension Service's five-point program on legumes is:

1. Plant on time.
2. Inoculate (if planted on land for first time).
3. Use plenty of phosphates—

Pastures Pay With Hogs, Too

Don't forget the hogs when thinking about a pasture. A good pasture for hogs will pay dividends just as will a good pasture with beef or dairy cattle or work stock.

Many farmers think that for hogs alone they need only to have a pasture with plenty of white clover. However, on most farms the general purpose pasture that has clover, grasses, and lespedeza is best. With this pasture cattle, sheep, hogs, and other forms of livestock can be fed. The county agent should help you plan a pasture program for your farm.

Experiment Station Is Asset

Laying the foundation for each new development in Alabama agriculture is the Experiment Station, one of Auburn's basic divisions.

A new crop, a new method of cultivation do not sound like related enterprises, but for Mrs. J. B. Checkler of Trinity in Calhoun County, they went together.

The old story "no money" faced Mrs. Checkler every time she thought of the need to raise and finish her kitchen. A calf, given her by a friend, solved this problem. She raised the calf and sold it for $25 and with this $25 she bought enough paint to paint her old stove and finished the kitchen. A Sub-stations are located at Belle Mina in Limestone County for farmers in the Valley of the Crosses in DeKalb County for farmers on Sand Mountain; at Marion Junction for the Black Belt; at Headland for the Wiregrass, and at Fairhope for farmers of the Gulf Coast. In addition there are eight experimental fields.

Using recently discovered resources are farmers of Clarke County who are raising lime from local deposits. Here's Assistant County Agent A. B. Walton examining a lime deposit near Suggsville.

It's never too late to start a year-round garden.

OF COTTON INCREASING"Among insects that attack the peach, few, if any, are potentially more important or more serious than the peach borer—it causes serious injury and the present control measures are whenever treatment is neglected."—From U. S. Department of Agriculture
Farmers' Bulletin, No. 1200.The injury done by the larva, or borer, which feeds in the trunk, principally at or below the ground level, and eats its burrows in the soil, is the most serious.Young larvae may soon be completely girdled and older ones so injure their vitality and crop-bearing capacity are greatly reduced.The peach tree borer kills huge numbers of peach trees in Coffee County each year. Infestation is usually noted by the presence of the tree, more or less mixed with dirt and brown soil.Young larvae are often found in the tree, and older ones are eaten by the caterpillars. The borer can be controlled best when the larva or worm stage is reached. It is not necessary to cover this material with the dicloflorphenone treatment.

MISSION STUDY AT METHODIST CHURCH—

The Methodist Study group of the Ada Matley Circuit of the Woman's Society of Christian Service met at the church at three o'clock with the president, Mrs. J. M. Rose, presiding.

The opening song was "Hark The Voice of Jesus Calling," after which Mr. R. C. Bryan, recording secretary, read the minutes of the preceding meeting.

Mr. W. R. Cross conducted a discussion on the meaning of Luke 15:11-32 and led the prayer. Mrs. Cross suggested that a scrap book on migration be made with each member contributing a page.

Corrine Bryan, Mrs. Dana French and Mrs. R. L. Cooper were named on the committee to begin making the book.

Plans were discussed for the observance of week of prayer to be held in November. Mrs. A. C. Durway and Mrs. Dana French were named to head the program.

The Mission Study, "Youth on the Highways," was given by Mrs. Alice French, who proved to be an efficient teacher.

Mrs. N. H. McTyre of Birmingham was a welcome guest and gave a talk on the meaning of her own experience with youth in the community. The meeting was dismissed with the watchword.

VIOLET RAINER CIRCLE ELCTS OFFICERS

The Violet Rainer Circle of the Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service met in the home of Mrs. J. W. Bedwell Monday afternoon at three o'clock for a business meeting to elect officers for the year.

Following the devotional, officers were elected as follows:

President—Mrs. Roberta Childs; Secretary-Treasurer—Mrs. Joe Morgan; Secretary of Bibli Study—Mrs. Maye, Mrs. F. A. Farris.

Routing details were then discussed of and the meeting dismissed with the watchword. During a delightful social, the hostess served a salad plate with tea to the eight members present.

NEW HOPE SINGING SOCIETY

The New Hope singing is growing rapidly. A great crowd gathered at the church for the singing last fourth Sunday night and everyone seemed to enjoy it. The choir and other communities is greatly appreciated.

The singing was opened by the singing of a lovely girl party Friday afternoon, while Mrs. Elba Bothe was seated to members of her church choir. Guitars, violins and rodded plants were combined to make attractive decorations in the audience colors.

A singing contest was conducted, when Mrs. Tom Hutchison was welcomed as a new member. The girls sang a three-part contest and the day of meeting changed to Friday.

After the guests were seated for the gathering, the sandwiches and an cool drink were served before engaging in the series of progresses.

Guests were Mrs. H. Jeter, Mrs. D. M. H. H. Jeter, Mrs. Tom Hutchison, Mrs. Thomas Ward, Mrs. Zadie Rowe and the hostess served a salad plate with tea to the eight members present.
